

To A Gear Jammer

Here's to a man, who drives a truck,
Who battles traffic, dust and muck

And pushes through with heavy loads,
No matter what or where the roads.

His life is one of sleepless nights,
Of facing thoughtless, undimmed lights;

Of endless miles of juggling spares
And changing tires 'tween lighted flares.

He must be made of sturdy stuff
Or long ago he'd had enough

Of loading cattle, oil and crates,
Then hauling them to other states.

To each of you who drives a truck
Uncle David wishes Good Luck.

Upon the road we've found you fair,
We hope that you will wind up there

And when you climb those golden stairs
We hope you have no use for flares

But go right on-and up-and through
And get your sleep that's long past due.

In Loving Memory
